

There's nothing to report today on maintainable discussions. The much anticipated updates that were scheduled to take place on Thursday's at CKRZ have not been taking place with any regularity. The Six Nations community has been fortunate however. At least they have been hearing updates on what has been taking place at the discussions to end the reclamation occupation in Caledonia. Many people off of the territory have been complaining that the province have been pretty quiet about what has been discussed, some asking for disclosure on what has been offered to Six Nations already. It has been five months since the reclamation of land in Caledonia began and it wasn't until after barricades went up at the site did the federal and provincial governments agree to discuss the issues around the land.
