

Young men kick Turtle Island News off Reclamation site

Turtle Island News
June 13, 2007

Turtle Island News reporters have been told they cannot enter the Six Nations Reclamation site. The announcement came from two men at the site. One man refused to allow reporter Donna Duric to take a photo of the site's support of Dudley George. He said site supporters didn't like recent coverage of incidents at the site. A second said the newspaper was not allowed on the site because of an incident in which editor Lynda Powless was pushed by a site supporter at a recent protest in Hagersville. The man involved in the assault is still at the Reclamation site. Spokeswoman Janie Jamieson said she would look into it. Turtle Island News editor Lynda Powless said the move by some site supporters is "unfortunate". But Six Nations land is open to all Six Nations.